

This is the Rockaway Hunt Club polo team, which defeated Meadow Brook at the Meadow Brook International Field, and won the right to go to England after the lost International Cup. Left to right—L. E. Stoddard, E. W. Hopping, Malcolm Stevenson and J. C. Cowdin.

Two of the "Devil Dogs" home from Germany, with two of the marines' small menagerie of mascots. Corporal L. T. Smith holds "Schnapps," a converted dachs. E. A. Woolf has the ant eater "Jimmy."

Photo. Kaplan Service.

Around the Outdoor World and Back as August Is Well Begun

The wind and the sea keep old Louis Brotton healthy and prosperous on the beach at Alameda, Cal. He picks up driftwood and cuts it to stove length with a wind sawmill made by himself.

Photo by Underwood & Underwood.

Carl Mays, pitcher and American League storm centre. Ban Johnson suspended him just after the Yankees bought him, and every Yankee from the owners down is wrathful. Photo. Kaplan Service.

An outdoor man and an outdoor girl. Charles Tiffany Richardson, Jr., and Beatrice Lawrence Breese on the beach at Southampton. Note the modish bare legs.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

Fred Stone really was a cowboy once, and he takes a holiday back at it now and then. At the Cheyenne Frontier Day roundup 15,000 people saw him bulldog this steer, after a failure in which he was nearly killed.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

This corn grows on Forty-seventh street, just off Fifth avenue, and Francis Howard, late of Maine, promises to turn a cow loose in it.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.